

Pivotal Insight Announces Award of a Technology and Organizational Assessment Contract for the EPA Facilities and Management Services Division

Arlington, VA – October, 1, 2008 – Pivotal Insight, LLC, a government best practices consulting and research firm, announces an award by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) Facilities and Management Services Division (FMSD), along with prime contractor and Pivotal’s long-standing business partner, Savan Group.

FMSD is requesting the support of Savan Group and Pivotal to work with its stakeholders to conduct a technology assessment of its real estate management tool and the processes it supports and to develop a tactical document management plan. The key objectives of this assessment initiative are to determine whether the current technology solution is supporting EPA’s real asset management mission requirements effectively, to identify viable short-term options for enhancement and optimization and to identify longer-term options for remediation of observed technology, organizational, or governance challenges. “This project is another opportunity for Pivotal to help the government achieve business value from its IT investments and really understand how IT management issues can manifest as technology issues,” remarked Rob Cimperman, Vice President of Pivotal Insight.

About the EPA Facilities and Management Services Division (FMSD)

The Facilities Management and Services Division, under the supervision of its Director, administers programs relating to facilities construction, acquisition, design and layout; repairs and improvements to hundreds of government owned facilities and leased spaces; transportation, property and supply management; and sustainable facilities practices.
